Dear Chenco group:

Hi, I am Chingkuan Wu, studying in National Chengchi University. I am a junior, looking for the opportunity for intern in next summer vocation to learn practical experiences. I am writing this letter to express my interest in your posting on 104 job search website to Commercial Banking, 2024 Summer Analyst. I consider myself a proactive and ambitious person. I am looking forward to enhancing my capabilities at Chenco.

I major in Economics. I regularly follow international issues and enjoy analyzing them from an economic consideration in the world. Additionally, I double major in International Business, aiming to integrate interdisciplinary knowledge for increasing my competitiveness.

During my academic years, I have been diligent in my studies, accumulating numerous credits to enrich my theoretical knowledge and maintaining a high academic performance. To combine theories and practice, the internship is particularly crucial for my personal and professional development.

I hold a leadership position in the NCCU Securities Research Society and have actively participated in project research. Our research focuses on industry supplies and demands, upstream and downstream relationships, and growth dynamics. Subsequently, we delve into the competitiveness of companies within the industry, their operational models, financial conditions. We compile reports and deliver presentations. This semester, our group is researching the textiles industry, and we are also learning some basic financial modeling. Within the trading team, I am involved in actual stock trading, a process that has allowed me to acquire knowledge in both financial markets and industries, and begin to develop the necessary skills for the future workplace.

I used to study in the Architecture Department at Tunghai University. During my academic tenure, I cultivated systematic thinking, analyzing things from a macro consideration. Through midterm and final presentations, I consistently improved my communication skills. I am accomplished in expressing various concepts to others through visuals and language.

My father is a scrivener, so I have been exposed to some real estate-related knowledge since I was a child. Combining a back ground in architecture and economics, I believe I can swiftly get on track.

I am looking forward to professional and hands-on real estate financial skills, as well as the details of investment management. I am thrilled at the opportunity to leverage my expertise and skill with your company. Thank you for taking time to read my cover letter.

Sincerely,

Chingkuan Wu
